Since the first human crawled into a cave and shouted, "This rocks!" shelters have been one of the big three basic human needs along with food and clothing.

These days we have associated shelters with concrete houses which are fixed and immovable.

But for most of our history, we have been wanderers and portable shelters have been a part of our genotype.

This is even seen in today's world in the form of camping on mountains and other locations. Since the experience can be new for you, this book is a complete guide on building shelters.

This book offers;

- Tips to select a mountain to build your shelter
- Tips to build a half cave shelter
- Getting the advantage of fallen trees to make shelter
- Tips to make huts, beaver huts and fagot shacks
- Tips to design wick-ups, Adirondack and Bart Teepee shelter
- Tips to build temporary shelter on snow

Shelters must be made strong enough to sustain heavy winds and storms, warm enough to keep you alive and spacious enough to let you sleep in there properly.
