Europe and Extraterritorial Asylum (Studies in International Law) Maarten den Heijer

Increasingly, European and other Western States have sought to control the movement of refugees outside their borders. To do this, States have adopted a variety of measures, including carrier sanctions, the interception of migrants at sea, the posting of immigration officers in foreign countries, and the external processing of asylum-seekers. This book focuses on the legal implications of external mechanisms of migration control for the protection of refugees and irregular migrants. It explores how refugee and human rights law have responded to the new measures adopted by States, and how States have sought cooperation with other actors in the context of migration control. The book defends the thesis that when European States attempt to control the movement of migrants outside their territories, they remain responsible, under international law, for protecting the rights of refugees, as well as their general human rights. It also identifies how EU law governs and constrains the various types of pre-border migration enforcement employed by EU Member States, and it examines how unfolding practices of external migration control conform with international law. This work will be essential reading for scholars and practitioners of asylum and refugee law throughout Europe and the wider world. (Series: Studies in International Law - Vol. 39)
