There is no better time for a heart warming clean love story than Valentine's Day. It is 1890, and a brave woman heads West to save her world from tumbling into despair.

Samuel Grace Walker cherishes everything about her Virginian life; her dearest brother, her home, her farm, and her land. But when all she loves is threatened to be taken from her, Josephine agrees to give into marrying a ruthless coal miner. But at the last second, she frees herself from his grasp. Seeking refuge and security, Josephine puts out an ad to become a mail-order bride.

Warren Cooper is a preacher turned Texas cattle rancher. Feeling the need to build his family, Warren responds to an ad from Josephine, when she is at her lowest point. But how will he react when he has to fight for Josephine's hand? When Josephine's past meets her present, battles of honesty and trust and doing the right thing become something both husband and wife must face together.
