Without Power Or Glory The Greens In Power 2007-2011 Dan Boyle

In 2007, the long held dreams of the Green Party to enter government became reality as they became a key part of Bertie Ahern's Coalition. However, the dream soon turned into a nightmare as economic collapse and political chaos descended on the island, resulting in a banking crisis, an IMF Bailout and an electoral wipe-out for the party and its members. While the party's naivety and inexperience made it ill prepared for these events, its contribution raised questions and made a difference in several important areas.

This is the first insider account from a senior Green Party leader describing events from before the 2007 election through the trauma of the bailout and defeat in the 2011 General Election.

A long-time member of the Green Party, Dan Boyle was nominated by Bertie Ahern to Seanad Éireann in August 2007 and served there until 2011. He served as Party Chair of the Green Party during their time in government and he participated in the negotiations with Fianna Fáil prior to the two parties reaching an agreement to enter government. He lives in Cork.
