Holes in the Skin (NHB Modern Plays) Robert Holman

A gripping play about the nature of violence.

15-year-old Kerry and her mum have moved to a council estate. Kerry hates it. She hates her mum's new man too. But when she meets a boy in the playground and asks him to do something about it, she finds herself adrift in a landscape of physical brutality, drugs - and, eventually, love.

'Marvellously mature and dramatically engrossing' - Guardian

'Hypnotic ... a shimmering, wistful evocation of lost innocence' - The Times
